

Abstract

5 A process for the purification of water is described, wherein a solution containing a proportion of a mixed microbiotic culture is added to the water in an environment having catalytic activity. This process may effectively be used for the purification of effluents and of waters in public and private installations.

10